VETS. PARADE IN CHATTANOOGA

Chattanooga, Tenn., Sept. 17.—Feeble with the weight of years, but with something like the old enthusiasm with which they battled in this vicinity half a century ago, several thousand survivors of the civil war made their annual march today through the gayly decorated streets of Chattanooga. The parade marked the formal opening of the forty-seventh national encampment of the G. A. R. For two hours the blue-clad veterans who came out of Chattanooga, Look-out Mountain and Missionary Ridge; of Stone River and of Chickamauga; of Fredericksburg and Antietam; of Gettysburg and the Wilderness, and some who participated in the panorama of war from Sumter to Appomattox, marched in martial array before thousands of cheering spectators, among whom were many of those whom they had faced on the battlefield of the '60s. The parade was reviewed by Commander-in-Chief Beers and his staff, official representatives of the State of Tennessee and the City of Chattanooga, and many invited guests.

Geraldine Farrar Sails for New York.

Paris, Sept. 17.—After having spent a few weeks here, conferring with dressmakers and modistes and devoting her spare time to the studying of her role in "Julien" with the composer, Charpentier, Miss Geraldine Farrar, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, sailed today for New York. Miss Frances Alda, another member of the Metropolitan Opera Company, also sailed for New York today but on a different steamer. Previous to the beginning of the operatic season Miss Alda intends to make a short concert tour through some of the principal cities of the United States.

Await Opening of Suicide's Will.

Kentwood, La., Sept. 17.—A sensation is expected to follow the probating of the will of William Williams, the wealthy farmer, who killed himself two weeks ago. According to reports, which have leaked out, some of the most unusual dispositions will be made of the property. The will is to be made public tomorrow. Williams left his bed at midnight and going into the barnyard nearly severed his own head with a razor. He is believed to have been insane as the outcome of pellagra.

Aim to Get Immigrants to Country.
New York, Sept. 17.—With a view at diverting immigrants from the large centres of population and into rural districts, particularly those of Arkansas, Mississippi, Tennessee and Louisiana, immigration officials of these states met here today in conference with railroad and steamship representatives. The conference which will be continued and concluded tomorrow, is held under the auspices of the commercial bodies of the Southern States interested in the matter.

Veterans Gather at Roanoke.

Roanoke, Va., Sept. 17.—With hundreds of gray-clad veterans and their friends in attendance, the annual reunion of the grand camp, United Confederate Veterans of Virginia, began in this city today. Appearances indicate that the encampment, which will last three days, will be one of the most enthusiastic gatherings the veterans of the Old Dominion have held in years. Roanoke is elaborately decorated for the occasion.

The egg was given to Mr. Little by Mrs. Joe Bazemore.

THAW WINS A VICTORY

FEDERAL JUDGE POSTPONES THE
HEARING OF HABEAS CORPUS APPLICATION.

Littleton, N. H., Sept. 16.—Counsel for Harry Kendall Thaw laid today the foundation for plans to carry his case to the Supreme Court of the United States—if such step is found necessary.

When the governor of New Hampshire passes on the matter of the extradition of Thaw to New York at the hearing to be held at Concord on Tuesday next, the findings, if adverse to Thaw, will be reviewed by the United States District Court, and should a decision against him then be rendered, successive appeals will be taken until the case reaches the highest court in the land.

This was the announcement made by the Thaw lawyers tonight after the most notable court victory for the fugitive, either in Canada or in the United States, since his escape from the Matteawan Asylum for the criminal insane.

It was made after the hearing on federal writ of habeas corpus, obtained in Thaw's behalf and invoking the fourteenth amendment to the constitution, had been indefinitely suspended until such time as counsel saw fit to begin arguments after the extradition matter had been decided by the governor.

Edgar Aldrich, United States Judge for the District of New Hampshire, in deciding that Thaw had the right, in effect, to hold his habeas corpus writ in abeyance, explained in his rescript that this was the petitioner's privilege in that, should be ordered extradited, "it would still be open to federal authority to afford such protection as the Constitution and the laws of the United States require."

Thaw's jubilant counsel, headed by Moses Crossman and L. J. Vorhaus, departed for New York, leaving their client in the joint custody of the United States Marshal and Sheriff Drew of Coos County, not to return until the hearing before the Governor is called. The head of the New York state forces, William Travers Jerome, and Deputy Attorney General Kennedy and Sheriff Hornbeak of Dutchess County, also left tonight. They will come back for the hearing Tuesday.

Thaw, according to the understanding reached, will be taken to Concord in the morning. He was quartered in Thayer's hotel tonight, feeling fine and predicting that the gates of Matteawan would never close behind him again.

Number of Medical Students in 1913.

The number of medical students in the United States for the year ending June 30, 1913, was 17,015, a decrease of 2,771 below 1911, decrease of 4,511 below 1910 and a decrease of 11,127 below 1904, when the highest number of students was enrolled. In fact, it is the lowest number since 1900. Of the total number of students 15,909 were in attendance at the so-called regular colleges, 850 at the homeopathic, and 256 at the eclectic colleges. The attendance at the regular colleges shows a decrease of 1,368 below that of last year and 2,505 below 1911. In the homeopathic colleges there was an increase of twenty-three above the attendance of 1912, but a decrease of forty below the total for 1911. The eclectic colleges show a decrease of fifty-two below 1912 and a decrease of 177 below 1911. These figures are taken from the annual educational number of The Journal of the American Medical Association.

BOMB FOR GEN. OTIS

LOS ANGELES PUBLISHER RECEIVES INFERNAL MACHINE
BUT ESCAPES INJURY.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 16.—Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, owner of the Los Angeles Times, received an infernal machine by mail today. It was the second time within three years that Gen. Otis' life has been attempted by a bomb.

Any chance of his being killed or injured by the bomb was foiled by the watchfulness of Gen. Otis' Japanese servant, who became suspicious of the package and called his employer's attention to it.

The first infernal machine sent to Gen. Otis was found at his residence a few hours after his newspaper plant had been destroyed through the efforts of the McNamara conspirators.

The attempt on his life today was attributed by the General to agencies friendly to those whose conspiracy ended in the destruction of the Times building and the killing of twenty-one men three years ago. The police and state authorities, however, believed that the Mexican question possibly had a part in it.

Gen. Otis is largely interested in lands in the Mexican territory of Lower California, where two years ago

MUSKOGEE

REUNION

TWO HUNDRED CONFEDERATE VETERANS GATHER FOR ANNUAL REUNION.

Muskogee, Okla., Sept. 16.—To the stirring strains of "Dixie" a thin, but unwavering line of confederate veterans, survivors of the dreary days of fifty years ago, marched to convention hall Tuesday morning for the opening session of the annual reunion of the Oklahoma division of United Confederate Veterans.

Shortly after 10 o'clock, General D. M. Hailey, state commander, called the convention to order with 150 veterans in attendance. More will arrive Wednesday and by Wednesday night the total attendance is expected to reach 300 or 400. With the sons and daughters of veterans, and their families, the total attendance of visitors in Muskogee is in the neighborhood of 1,000.

General D. M. Hailey, commanding the Oklahoma division U. C. V. called the first session to order shortly after 10 o'clock. Nearly 200 veterans were in the hall and all rose and applauded wildly when the band played "Dixie."

The famous "rebel yell" rang out through the big hall and then the veterans stood for the invocation which was asked by Rev. Theo. F. Brewer of Wagoner, division chaplain and himself a veteran.

Hon. S. M. Rutherford of Muskogee delivered the address of welcome to which Col. A. P. Watson, state corporation commissioner, and former first lieutenant in the First South Carolina Infantry responded. Hon. H. W. Griever of Dallas gave greetings from the state of Texas, while best wishes were extended by Mrs. C. E. England of Durant, sponsor, and General L. B. Beard of Grant, Okla. A poem dedicated to Mrs. T. D. Davis, state president of the U. D. C., and the youngest state president in the country, was also read. This is the sixtieth annual reunion since the consolidation of the Oklahoma and Indian Territory divisions, and the amount of business is greater than ever before in the history of the organization.

At the morning's session Rev. Brewer as a member of a committee on history, reported that although he had been assured that objectionable features would be eliminated from the histories being used in the Oklahoma public schools that such action had not been taken as yet.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades turns gray, streaked and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred fold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic; you can get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color, thickness and lustre of your hair and remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.

GROWING IN INTEREST

LARGE CONGREGATIONS ATTEND EVERY SERVICE OF WIL- LEAMS REVIVAL.

The revival at the Baptist church is growing in interest with every service. Large and attentive congregations fill the house at every service, even the morning service being well attended, and Evangelist Williams increases in power and influence at every one. Tuesday morning he preached on the subject: "Three Sinners and Their Sins," the sinners being Judas, Pilate and Peter. He spoke in part as follows:

In the old pictures of Christ by the great masters a halo proceeds from His face which lights up the surrounding figures, sometimes with dazzling effect. This is emblematic of the moral light emanating from Him which revealed and brought into sharp relief both the good and the evil in the persons among whom He moved. In the tragic, crucial hour of His passion three men appeared whose sins are shot through and through by the search-light of His holiness.

Judas and his sin. Judas the nephew of Calaphas, the high priest and one of the twelve disciples of Christ. His sin was the breaking of a solemn covenant which was pledged, by Christ's giving him the portion at the table. Judas betrayed the Lord for thirty pieces of silver. His sin was the outcome of avarice. You remember at the home of Lazarus the one whom Jesus had raised from the dead six days before the passover. They made a supper for Jesus and His disciples. Now as Jesus and His disciples reclined around the table Mary came to Jesus and took a pound of ointment of spikenard, very costly, and anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair. Then said Judas which should betray Him, why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor? This he said, not that he cared for the poor, but because he was a thief.

"Just for a handful of silver he left us, Just for a ribbon to stick on his coat."

Now my people every day, you see some one who has sold out for a few pieces of silver or a little social function of some kind. Some people are mighty cheap and are bought at the devil's auction for a song.

What he did with his sin. He talked it over with his enemies. He sought to undo it. He took the money back. He told them that he had betrayed innocent blood. They said "What is that to us." Finally he took it upon himself and committed suicide. He could not stand under the load. It was too heavy for him.

"Blot out his name, then, record one lost soul more, One task more declined, one more footpath untrod, One more devil's triumph and sorrow for angels, One wrong more to man, one more insult to God!"

Pilate and his sin and what led up to it. Pilate had outraged the Jews several times. His troops once brought their standards, with the image of the emperor, into the Holy City. The people were excited into frenzy till he had the standard removed. He had taken money from the treasury of the temple for the construction of an aqueduct, which led to another riot and slaughter; and he had slain some Galileans while in the act of sacrificing. He had reason to fear the Jews, for they had before this sent a deputation to Rome on account of his acts, and this gave them more courage in presenting their cause. Thus Pilate's past history was a hindrance to present duty. He carried it about him like the dead body the Romans sometimes chained to convicts.

Pilate's conscience, the prisoner's innocence, his wife's dream, Christ's effort to give him a chance. Then Pilate entered into the judgment hall again, and called Jesus, and said unto him, "art thou the king of the Jews?" Jesus answered him saying that this thing of thy self, or did others tell it thee of me?"

What did Pilate do with his sin. He tried to wash it away with water, but he could not do it. Thousands of people today all over the world are trying to get rid of their sins in the same way. He washed and he washed but his sin stayed with him just like your sins are staying with you. You have not soap enough! You have not water enough! Do you hear me! It will take the blood, and nothing but the blood, do you hear!

He followed at a distance. He kept bad company.

What did Peter do with his sin. He took it to Christ. He confessed it. He said, "I have sinned just like he will forgive you when you take them to Him, and confess them. Christ says when you confess your sin I will forgive you your sin.

There is no such thing as forgiveness for sin until confession is made to God through Christ. "For as much as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers, but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot."

"For even hereunto were ye called, because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example that you should follow His steps, who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth; who his own self bare our sins in His own body on the tree, that we being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness, by whose stripes ye were healed. For ye were as sheep going astray; but are now returned unto the Shepherd and bishop of your souls.

The church building was crowded, one hundred chairs were brought into extra use. The singing was exceptionally good. The quartet, Judge Duncan, Mr. Walters, Mr. Huber, Mr. Cuning, rendered most beautifully "The Way-side Cross."

Evangelist Sid Williams, preached for one hour and a half on Hell as the Bible teaches. "For if God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, don't you know that he is not going to spare the man whose heart is in rebellion through unbelief. Unbelief is the sin that condemns men and sends them to a devil's hell. The Bible speaking of the woman of pleasure says her house is the way to hell, going down to the chambers of death. The scarlet woman drags thousands of men with her down to hell. The wicked shall be turned into hell and all the nations that forget God. But the fearful, and unbelieving and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone.

HOGS ON A BIG DRUNK

While at Steedman Monday, County Attorney Roland found a 20 gallon keg of cider, which he rolled out and poured into the gutter. About that time two hogs came along. The cider appealed strongly to their appetite and they drank as long as they could hold a drop. In a few minutes the cider began to get in its work and the porkers seemed to be transported to the seventh hog heaven. They ran about in pure joy, squealed and put on every kind of a show known to the swine family. Finally one lay down in the road, waved his feet in the air in a feeble manner and with mouth wide open let on a series of joyous squeals as a final scene of the show. The owner happened along and thought his hogs had been poisoned, but after a time they sobered up and went their way as well behaved hogs should.

NEW VARIETY OF COTTON

This afternoon J. W. Flowers showed the News a stalk of a new variety of cotton, which is called Half-and-Half. It gets its name from the fact that it has so few seed and such abundant lint that the lint weight almost as much as the seed. Mr. Flowers states that Joe Finley of Lightning Ridge, who raised three bales of this variety from three acres last year obtained a yield of 47 3/4 pounds of lint from 100 pounds of seed cotton.

Mr. Flowers has an acre of this cotton from which he will get about 1,200 pounds, or enough for a big bale. By the side of this acre is a field of Mebane, which will yield about half as much, although both received the same attention. Mr. Flowers has already contracted to sell his entire output of seed for $2 per bushel. He bought his seed from Virginia.

The stalk he brought in today was fully four feet in height, perfectly green and well fruited.

OBJECTS TO NEW PARK PURCHASE

Dear Mr. Editor:

Referring to the article published "By Request" in your issue of 12th inst giving resolution passed by the Honorable Board of Commissioners on the 26th day of August for the purchase of 1 and 98-100 acres of land at $1,500 per acre, would like to say a few words.

In the first place I would observe that some of our citizens seem to have undergone quite a change in their attitude toward City Parks, as only a few years ago some of the most enthusiastic supporters of this measure opposed the City Council's accepting as a gift 5 or 6 acres for Park purposes which was so generously offered by one of our representative citizens and finally accepted by the City Council. They seem to be afraid that this hollow in Ford addition where the dust fills the atmosphere in dry weather, will be moved away.

Now this seems to me a very unwise purchase considering the short crops and burdened condition of the people. Why we are already bonded and wrapped up with indebtedness until our taxes amount practically to confiscation. Shall we incur an additional burden? Are not your taxes high enough? I am opposed to any additional burdens unless an emergency exist.

Besides has the city's credit fallen so low she is required to execute a mortgage and pay 8 per cent interest on the deferred payments.

Another thing, this hollow is worthless as a Park until quite an additional sum has been spent on it for improvements. Hence, in assuming this needless burden we are really taking on at least twice the $3000. How is it that the city is unable to mow the grass and keep up the present park and yet feels inclined to wrap up the city with mortgage to buy another one?

Now, under the provisions of the City Charter this deal will become a purchase on September 26th unless a petition is filed to leave it to the voters to pass on; a petition of this kind will be presented in a day or so and let me urge every man to sign and mirable pathos which seemed a mute appeal for protection from brutality. "That question is a needless one," said the Countess, quietly. "It was a cruel one, also, Monsieur Scarlett."

"I did not mean it as an offensive question," said I. "I was merely reciting a fact, most creditable to Mr. Buckhurst. And if it be true that Monsieur Buckhurst desires to atone for what has happened, then it is perfectly proper for me, even as a prisoner myself, to speak plainly. Is it not my duty, as a guardian of national interests, to point out to Mr. Buckhurst his honest errors? Certainly it is, madame, and this is the proper time."

Turning pompously to Buckhurst, I fancied I could almost detect a sneer on that inexpressive mask he wore—at least I hoped I could, and I said, heavily:

"Monsieur, for a number of years there has passed under our eyes here in France certain strange phenomena. Thousands of Frenchmen have, so to speak, separated themselves from the rest of the nation."

"France is only a name to them; they were born there, they live there, they derive their nourishment from her without gratitude. But France is nothing to them; their motherland is the Internationale!"

I was certain now that the shadow of a sneer had settled in the corners of Buckhurst's thin lips.

"Believe me, madame, the time is coming when the whole world will rise to combat this Internationale; and when the mask is dragged from its malignant visage, there, grinning be-Diamonds Lay Blazing on My Blanket. And, will appear the same old 'Specter Rouge,' torn in one hand, gun in the other, squatting behind a barricade of paving-blocks."

I wagged my head dolefully. "I could not have rested had I not warned Mr. Buckhurst of this," I said, sentimentally.

Which was fairly well done, considering that I was figuratively lamenting over the innocence of the most accomplished scoundrel that ever sat in the supreme council of the Internationale.

Buckhurst looked thoughtfully at the floor.

"Your earnestness almost converts me," he said, lifting his stealthy eyes. The Countess appeared weary and perplexed.

"At all events," she said, "we must do nothing to embarrass France now; we must do nothing until this frightful war is ended."

After a silence Buckhurst said, "But you will go to Paradise, madame?" "Yes," replied the Countess, hesitantly.

Now, what is Heaven's name abstracted that rogue to Paradise?

CHAPTER VII.

A Struggle Foreshadowed. I took my breakfast by the window, watching the German soldiery cleaning up Morebroun.

A soldier came in and started the fire in my fireplace. When he went out I drew my code-book from my breeches pocket and tossed it into the fire. After it followed my commission, my memoranda, and every scrap of writing. The diamonds I placed in the bosom of my flannel shirt.

A German ambulance surgeon—

rived to see me in the afternoon.

After a brief examination he sat down and resumed a very bad cigar, which had been smoldering between his carefully kept fingers.

"Do you know," he said admiringly, "that I have never before seen just such a wound. The spinal column is not even grazed. As far as I can see the blow from the bullet temporarily paralyzed the spinal cord. There is no fracture, no depression. I do not see why you should not walk if you desire to."

"When? Now?"

"Try it," he said, briefly.

I tried. Apart from a certain muscular weakness and a great fatigue, I found it quite possible to stand, even to move a few steps. Then I sat down again, and was glad to do so.

The doctor was looking at my legs rather grimly, and it suddenly flashed on me that I had dropped my blanket and he had noticed my hussar's trousers.

"So," he said, "you are a military prisoner? I understood from the provost marshal that you were a civilian."

As he spoke Buckhurst appeared at the door, and then sauntered in, quietly greeting the surgeon, who looked around at the sound of his footsteps on the stone floor. There was no longer a vestige of doubt in my mind that Buckhurst was a German agent, or at least that the Germans believed him to be in their pay. And doubtless he was in their pay, but to whom he was faithful nobody could know with any certainty.

"How is our patient, doctor?" he asked. "Can he travel today?"

"Before he travels," said the officer, "it might be well to find out why he wears part of a hussar uniform."

"I've explained that to the provost," observed Buckhurst, examining his well-kept finger-nails. "And I have a pass for him also—if he is in a fit condition to travel."

The officer gave him a glance full of frank dislike, adjusted his saber, pulled on his white gloves, and, bowing very slightly to me, marched straight out of the room and down the stairs without taking any notice of Buckhurst. The latter looked after the officer, then his indifferent eyes returned to me. Presently he sat down and produced a small slip of paper, which he very carefully twisted into a pocket hat.

"I suppose you doubt my loyalty to France," he said.

Then, logically continuing my role of the morning, I began to upbraid him for a traitor and swear that I would not owe my salvation to him.

"You are unjust and a trifle stupid," he said. "I am paid by Prussia for information which I never give. But I have the entire of their lines. I do it for the sake of the Internationale. The Internationale has a few people in its service. . . . And it pays them well."

He looked squarely at me as he said this. I almost trembled with delight: the man undervalued me, he had taken me at my own figure, and now, holding me in absolute contempt, he was going to begin on me.

"Scarlett," he said, in English, "let us come to the point. I am a mercenary American; you are an American mercenary, paid by the French government. You care nothing for that government or for the country; you would drop both today if your pay ceased. You and I are outsiders; we are in the world to watch our chances. And our chance is here."

"The time is coming when the richest city in Europe will be put to the sack. You don't believe it? Yet you shall live to see Paris besieged, and you shall live to see Paris surrender, and you shall live to see the Internationale rise up from nowhere, seize the government by the throat, and choke it to death under the red flag of universal—ahem! . . . license!"

The faintest sneer came into his pallid face—"and every city of France shall be a commune, and we shall pass from city to city, leisuredly, under the law—our laws, which we will make—and I pity the man among us who cannot place his millions in the banks of England and America!"

He leaned forward in his chair, idly twisting his crumpled bit of paper in one hand.

"I am not fool enough to believe that our reign will last," he said. "It may last a month, two months, perhaps three. Then we leaders will be at one another's throats—and the game is up! It's always so—mob rule can't last—it never has lasted and never will. But the prudent man will make hay before the brief sunshine is ended; I expect to economize a little, and set aside enough—well, enough to make it pay, you see."

"He's bound to get to Paradise, why?" I wondered, and said, aloud.

"What do you want of me?"

"I want immunity from the secret police, Mr. Scarlett."

"There is one thing I want to ask you," said I. "Why do you desire to go to Paradise?"

"Well," he said, slowly, "I shall not tell you."

"Why not?" I demanded.

"—But I'll say this," he continued.

"I want you to come to Paradise with me and that fool of a woman. I want you to report to your government that you are watching the house in Paradise, and that you are hoping to catch me there."

"You refuse to tell me why you wish to stay at the house in Paradise?"

"Yes, . . . I refuse. And, by-the-way, the Countess is to think that I have presented myself in Paris and that the government has pardoned me."

He rose and walked to the window; at the same moment I heard the sound of wheels below.

"I believe that is our carriage," he said. "Are you ready to start, Mr. Scarlett?"

"Is the Countess de Vassart to go with us?" I asked, trying to find a reason for these events which were succeeding one another too quickly to suit me.

He gave me an absent-minded nod; a moment later the Countess entered. Buckhurst aided me to rise, the Count-

"I suppose you doubt my loyalty to France."

He threw my hussar jacket over my shoulders and buttoned it. "I congratulate you on your convalescence," he said, in a low voice. "Lean on me, monsieur."

By head swam; hips and knees were without strength; she aided me down the stairway and out into the pale sunshine, where stood the same mud-splashed, rusty vehicle which had brought us hither from La Trappe.

As I stood beside the carriage, wondering how I was going to get in, I felt an arm slip under my neck and another slide gently under my knees, and Buckhurst lifted me.

The Countess stepped into the carriage and took her place beside me; Buckhurst followed, seating himself opposite us, and the Alsatian driver mounted to the box.

"Your safe-conduct carries you to the French outposts at Saverne," said the provost dryly. "If there are no longer French outposts at Saverne, you may demand a visa for your pass and continue south to Strasbourg."

Buckhurst half turned towards the driver. "Alles," he said, quietly, and the two gaunt horses moved on.

"Is there a railroad at Saverne?" I asked.

"You will take a train at Strasbourg," replied Buckhurst.

"And then? Are we going direct to Paris?"

"Madame de Vassart desires to go there," he said, glancing at her with a sort of sneaking deference which he now assumed in her presence.

"It is true," said the Countess, turning to me. "I wish to rest for a little while before I go to Point Paradise. I am curiously tired of poverty, Monsieur Scarlett," she added, and held out her shabby gloves with a gesture of despair; "I am reduced to very little—I have scarcely anything left. . . . and I am weak enough to long for the scent of the winter violets on the boulevards."

It was late in the afternoon when the last Prussian outpost halted us. I had been asleep for hours, but was awakened by the clatter of horses, and I opened my eyes to see a dozen Uhlanes come cantering up and surround our carriage. One of the troopers tied a white handkerchief to his lance-tip, wheeled his wiry horse, and, followed by a trumpeter, trotted off ahead of us.

Presently, very far away on the gray-green hill-side, I saw a bit of white move. One minute, two, three, ten passed. Then, distant galloping sounded along the road, nearer, nearer; three horsemen suddenly wheeled into view ahead—French dragons, advancing at a solid gallop. The Uhlan with the flag spurred forward to meet them, saluted, wheeled his horse and came back.

And now the brief ceremony was over and our rusty vehicle moved off down the hill, while the Uhlanes turned aside and clattered off, scattering showers of muddy gravel in the rising wind.

WISHED SHE COULD DIE

And Be Free From Her Troubles, but Finds Better Way.

Columbia, Tenn.—"Many a time," says Mrs. Jessie Sharp, of this place, "I wished I would die and be relieved of my suffering from womanly troubles. I could not get up, without pulling at something to help me, and stayed in bed most of the time. I could not do my housework."

The least amount of work tired me out. My head would swim, and I would tremble for an hour or more. Finally, I took Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I am not bothered with pains any more, and I don't have to go to bed. In fact, I am sound and well of all my troubles."

Cardui goes to all the weak spots and helps to make them strong. It acts with nature—not against her. It is for the tired, nervous, irritable women, who feel as if everything were wrong, and need something to quiet their nerves and strengthen the worn-out system.

If you are a woman, suffering from any of the numerous symptoms of womanly trouble, take Cardui. It will help you. At all druggists.
